

Youth Voting Rights Act

Senator Elizabeth Warren

The Twenty-Sixth Amendment, ratified on July 1, 1971, prohibits the denial or abridgement of the right to vote on account of age for all citizens aged 18 or older. As bipartisan Congressional supermajorities and nearly all states recognized when they adopted the Amendment in the fastest ratification process in American history, the fundamental right to vote extends to young Americans. But over fifty-five years after ratification, the Twenty-Sixth Amendment's promise remains unfulfilled. Young voters participate in elections at lower rates, their provisional and mail-in ballots are rejected at disproportionate rates, and they routinely face serious obstacles to voter registration and in-person voting.

Now, Donald Trump is trying to manipulate election rules to make it harder to vote, with policies that disproportionately impact young people: promoting the dubious SAVE Act, which risks disenfranchising millions of young voters by imposing onerous proof of citizenship and voter ID requirements and prohibiting the use of student IDs to meet voter ID requirements; attacking on-campus voter registration programs; and suspending critical research to expand student voting.

The Youth Voting Rights Act would help young voters to defend their fundamental right to vote and expand youth access to voting. Specifically, the bill would:

- Empower individuals and the government to enforce the Twenty-Sixth Amendment. The bill creates a private right of action to enforce the Twenty-Sixth Amendment and establishes a national standard of review for such lawsuits.
- Expand voter registration services at public colleges and universities. The bill designates offices at all public institutions of higher education as “voter registration agencies” under the National Voter Registration Act of 1993, imposing voter registration obligations on these institutions.
- Allow young people in every state to pre-register to vote before turning 18. To ensure that young people can vote as soon as they turn 18, the bill requires states to establish pre- registration processes for 16- and 17-year-olds and allows states to expand their processes to youth younger than 16.
- Require institutions of higher education to have on-campus polling places. The bill ensures the availability of polling places on campuses of institutions of higher education wherever possible, removing one of the most significant barriers to youth voting access.
- Prohibit durational residency requirements for all federal elections. The bill extends the Voting Rights Act's protections against durational residency requirements and absentee voting limitations to all federal elections, and codifies the right to vote from a college domicile.
- Prohibit age-based restrictions on voting by mail. The bill amends the Voting Rights Act to codify that age-based restrictions on vote-by-mail violate the 26th Amendment.
- Guarantee that states accept student IDs to meet voter-identification requirements. The bill mandates the acceptance of student IDs to meet state voter ID requirements in federal elections.
- Create a grant program dedicated to youth involvement in elections. The bill creates a grant program for states to encourage youth involvement in elections, including through pre- registration, updated civics curricula, and a paid fellowship for young persons to support youth civic engagement.
- Gather data on youth voter registration and election participation. The bill requires the federal government to study voter registration, absentee voting, and provisional voting trends by age and race to inform efforts to improve youth involvement in elections.
